M. WITTE DENIES WIRELESS REPORTS

NOT CLOTHED WITH POWER TO CONCLUDE TREATY.

Agreement Not Considered Likely.
Statement Given Out by Secretary.
Japan Brave and Gallant.

New York, August 2.—With the arrival here today on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse of M. Sergius J. Witte, chief of the Russian plenipotentiaries, and his party, the belief became general that the negotiations which are to begin next week in the quiet little seaport town of Portsmouth on the coast of New Hampshire must prove fruitless. This, too, despite the fact that both the Japanese and Russian delegates profess to be hopeful of the outcome. In fact, judging by the attitude of M. Witte, he is here more because the czar desired to give the world an unmistakable proof of friendship for President Roosevelt and the American people rather than because he was willing to bring to an end the conflict in the far east which has proven so disastrous to Russian arms.

M. WITTE MAKES DENIAL.
The first thing that the distinguished Russian did upon arriving at the Hotel St. Regis, where he and his party are quartered, was to issue an "official" denial of the interview sent by wireless telegraph from the big steamer to the London Daily Telegraph last Sunday, and that sent by wireless to the New York Herald today, in which he was quoted as saying that he did not believe the Japanese and Russian envoys would be able to reach a common ground of agreement. M. Witte denied the interviews because they were the fruit of private conversations and did not represent the official attitude of the Russian party. However, inasmuch as he intimated that he was not clothed with absolute powers to conclude a treaty of peace, and as the Japanese envoys have from the first insisted that they will not be a party to any conference which has for its object merely the transmission of the terms upon which Japan is willing to end the war, well informed diplomats here are forced to conclude that will be made at the Portsmouth meeting. They base their opinion upon the following paragraph contained in a typewritten statement given out by M. Witte's secretary to the newspaper reporters who met him on board the steamship in the lower bay:

LITTLE PROGRESS

"I need hardly point out that it is my ardent desire that the two chivalrous foes, who first became acquainted on the field of battle, may have found in each others' sterling qualities motives powerful enough to cultivate that acquaintanceship until it ripens into lasting friendship. Meanwhile, however, the terms offered must first be ascertained, weighed and judged admissible by Russia before she can proceed to formal negotiations."

IS NOT A LINGUIST.
M. Witte does not speak English, and but indifferent French, so that, interviewing him became a task for a third party, his secretary, Jean Korostovetz, a former attaché of the Russian legation at Washington and later Admiral Alexeff's chief aide at Port Arthur, acting as the go-between. Throughout the voyage the Russians held aloof from their fellow passengers, spending a great deal of time in their private apartments. They were up early today and watched the progress of the big vessels along the coast and into New York bay with absorbing interest. On arriving at quarantine the Russians were taken off the steamer by the United States gunboat Mayflower and promptly landed in New York. They were driven at once to the Hotel St. Regis, where the state apartments were reserved for them. Baron Rosen, the Russian ambassador to the United States, who is to act with M. Witte in the negotiations at Portsmouth, held an extended conference with his chief tonight, but all information regarding the matters discussed was refused.

PRaise FOR AMERICA.
The official statement issued by M. Witte's secretary, after praising Americans and President Roosevelt and American newspapers generally for their work on behalf of peace and friendship among nations, continues: "It is in compliance with the American people's desire for peace, of which President Roosevelt was the authorized exponent, that his majesty the czar has empowered me to come hither and ascertain the conditions which our gallant adversary deems necessary and adequate for a basis for the peace negotiations."

"I need hardly point out that it is my ardent desire that the two chivalrous foes, who first became acquainted on the field of battle, may have found in each others' sterling qualities motives powerful enough to cultivate that acquaintanceship until it ripens into lasting friendship."

Meanwhile, however, the terms of the proposed must first be ascertained, weighed and judged admissible by Russia before she can proceed to formal negotiations.

Heretofore, it has been customary in cases like this to settle all such preliminaries before the meeting of the plenipotentiaries whose task it was to agree. Now the very fact that his majesty the czar consented to take a course different from the ancient custom and to appoint a commission to learn the nature of our brave enemies' terms is an eloquent token of the friendliness which he and his subjects continue to cherish toward the people of the United States."

RUSSIA NOT YET EXHAUSTED.
To a correspondent who accompanied him from Cherbourg, M. Witte took occasion to declare that the reports that Russia was at the end of her resources and could no longer continue to fight were absolutely untrue. He intimated that it would be much easier to raise a billion dollars to continue the war than to pay an indemnity with.
